MATERIAL

Dannamond polyurethane (PU) holds are lighter, stronger and more impact resistant than traditional polyester (PE) holds. PE holds offer a more rock like feel and ultimate wear resistance.

SHAPES & SURFACES

Kitka holds are shaped for climbing with minimalistic Scandinavian design. The shapes are hand friendly and the surface is grippy yet easy on the skin. Just add a bit of chalk and you're good to go!

MOUNTING

Bolt-on holds can be tightened either with cap-head or countersunk bolts. Most of the holds also include an additional screw hole to prevent spinning.

All bolt and screw holes are equipped with stainless steel re-inforcements, which hold up with the demands of chemical washing.

From Route Setting To Route Art – The Five Principles Of Route Setting!

In this blog Tuomo Lankinen shares his thoughts on route setting. Tuomo is the owner of the BoulderSaimaa climbing centre and head route setter.

We like to talk about climbing problems instead of routes. A problem is interesting, sometimes impossible-looking, beautiful and inviting, and it teaches the climber to solve a new difficulty. A problem is addictive, it sometimes comes into your dreams and invites you, over and over again.

Our goal is to create a space in which climbers of different levels from first-timers to experienced climbers enjoy themselves and learn new things about climbing and themselves. Here we present the main principles of BoulderSaimaa's route setting:

1. Quality
2. Safety
3. Variety
4. Equality
5. Freshness

1 Quality

Climbing is the most important service of the climbing centre; thus good climbing is everything. Investing in quality is a conscious choice, one which comes with the cost of cutting the number of routes. It usually takes more time to make better and more versatile problems and they take up more space, with their large, modern holds.

How many interesting, addictive and educational problems are available to each visitor is more important to us than pure quantity.

2 Safety

Of course, the route setter also has a large responsibility for the safety of climbing. When setting problems, we carefully consider the directions of falls, the types of grip and other factors affecting the safety of climbing.

Sometimes a whole sector needs to be dedicated to just one problem, for safety reasons. For example, in order to climb the balance challenge on the slab, it is vital that there are no holds on the way that can cause injury when falling on them.

3 Equality

For us, equality means that all customers have the opportunity to enjoy high-quality problems regardless of skill level, age, size, etc.

The system that directs our route setting is based on standard distribution. The easiest problems are most numerous, as they serve most climbers. A significant proportion of BoulderSaimaa climbers are beginners and children, and we want to invest in enabling them to climb good problems too.

Height has a sometimes greater and sometimes lesser impact on the difficulty of the problem. We do our best to ensure that the problems can be climbed by shorter climbers, too, but this is far from always possible.

Large grips and volumes are increasingly common to even out height differences and are therefore widely used in competitions. For the same reason their popularity has increased in normal use in climbing halls. To even out height differences, we also often use “extra” holds that longer climbers may not need, but shorter ones usually find useful.

4 Freshness

We invest in making our problems fresh! We reinvent all routes and sectors every six weeks or less. New challenges keep climbers’ and route setters’ ideas and activities fresh!

As far as climbers are concerned, the problems need to be fresh. When they are new, their “usage value” is high, but the longer they are on the wall, the more quickly they are forgotten, except for a few classic routes and beloved projects. New climbing opportunities are what indoor climbing is all about!

Of course, freshness also involves new climbing holds and volumes, which we order on average a couple of times a year.

Size: S - XL

Rating: Moderate - Hard

Mare Rings - S

PU

Style: crimp, edge

Description: The most difficult shapes in all the three Mare Rings sets. These guys will make you crimp hard! The upside is that you won't hear any annoying beta over your pulleys begging for mercy.

Screw mount only.

Size: S - M

Rating: Hard

Mare Rings - M

Style: edge

Description: The easiest of the three Mare Rings sets. This set is very versatile. You can pinch, crimp and go open hand or you can slip off if you want to. It's up to you. Screw mount only, so you can stick 'em where you want!

Size: S - L

Rating: Moderate.

Mare Rings - L

Style: edge

Description: The largest and easiest of the three Mare Rings sets. Edge angles vary from slopers to incuts. You can set unbelievably awkward match moves with these holds. Screw mounted only, so you can set 'em exactly where you want.

Groovy Slopers – Big

Style: slope

Description: Balls with the groove! Man, these are fun for dyno boulders! Know that micro-adjustment you make when you sense there's something more for the finger tips? Guaranteed with these holds. Biggie size: diameter 18 cm; heights 9.5 cm, 6 cm and 4 cm.

Size: XL- MEGA

Rating: Hard

Groovy Slopers – Medium

Style: slope

Description: Hand-sized grooved spheres. Simple but versatile shapes, as they serve as slopers, pinch-es, or even crimps depending on the angle of pull. Excellent for setting symmetric training sequences! Diameter: 12,5 cm. Heights: 6,5 cm, 5,5 cm and 4 cm.

Size: L-XL

Rating: Moderate

Groovy Edges – M

Style: edge, pich

Description: A system set of edges. Straight, concave or convex edge and multiple edge angles of each type. The holds look the same from below, so when climbing you never know what you're going to get. Perfect for on-sight competitions! Turn the art of routesetting into route-engineering!

Size: M

Rating: Moderate - Hard

Groovy Edges - S

Style: edge, pinch

Description: A system set of edges. Smaller and thinner than Groovy edges M. The holds look the same from below, so when climbing you never know what you're going to get. Perfect for on-sight competitions! Another great thing is that when setting, it's easy to adjust the difficulty of each move when you have different versions of the same hold.
